

CUT, LAMINATE, HAND OVER

Self-Advocacy Scripts: "I Need..." Cards

Eight ready-to-cut cards that put a self-advocacy request into a student's hand instead of their mouth, for the moment finding the words is the hardest part. Written with Deaf and hard-of-hearing (DHH) students in mind — and just as useful for any student who needs to self-advocate for access.

✂ CUT ALONG THE DASHED LINES ✂

CARD 1

"Please repeat that."

CARD 2

"I need captions turned on."

CARD 3

"Can I move seats so I can see your face or the board?"

CARD 4

"My hearing technology isn't working right now."

CARD 5

"I need that in writing too."

CARD 6

"Please face me when you talk."

CARD 7

"I didn't catch that — can you say it a different way?"

CARD 8

"I need a partner who will write things down for me."

Print on cardstock if you have it — one sheet makes a full set of eight.

How to use these cards

- Laminate the set and keep it on a lanyard, a desk ring, or a card stand — wherever the student can reach it without asking permission first.
- Let the student point or hand a card over instead of finding the words out loud in the moment. Some students will outgrow the cards; some will use them for years. Both are fine.
- Any adult in the room can respond to a card the same way they'd respond to the words — a sub, a specialist, a hallway monitor. That's the point.
- Reintroduce the set at the start of every term and with every new adult who works with the student, the same way you'd reintroduce any other support.

However this student communicates — ASL, spoken language, a hearing device, or a combination — these cards give them one more low-effort way to ask for what they need, on the days that's hard to say out loud.

When you get a card, here's the ask

Card	What the adult does
“Please repeat that” / “a different way”	Say it again, or rephrase with different words — don't just repeat louder.
“I need captions turned on”	Turn on captions before you press play, every time, for every student in the room.
“Can I move seats...” / “face me when you talk”	Let them move, and check that your face is visible — not backlit by a window or turned to the board.
“My hearing technology isn't working”	Don't troubleshoot the device yourself — follow the student's IEP plan for who to contact, and keep teaching with the other supports in place meanwhile.
“I need that in writing too” / “a partner who will write things down”	Jot key words on the board, share your slides, or pair them with a note-taking partner.

© Adam & Katelyn Spinozzi · AI-Ready School. Free resource: print and share within your school; please don't resell or repost online. This resource is informational; follow your audiologist's and IEP team's guidance. Built and audited by two certified teachers — and the parents of a deaf child.