

EVERY CONTACT, DOCUMENTED, WITHOUT A SPREADSHEET

Parent Communication Log

"Did I already tell them about this?" stops being a guess. Print one contact log per student, a behavior/incident log for the harder conversations, and a class-wide quick-tracker so you can see who you haven't reached in a glance — plus the safe way to describe any of it to an AI tool afterward.

What's in this pack

- The individual contact log — one page per student, every call, email, and note in one place.
- The incident/behavior documentation log — more detail, for the conversations that might come up again.
- The class quick-tracker — one page, every student, at-a-glance contact status.
- The AI safe-prompt companion — how to use this log with AI without ever typing a student's name.

The individual contact log

Print one per student, three-hole punch, keep in a binder alphabetically. This page covers about 12 contacts before you need a second copy.

STUDENT			PARENT/GUARDIAN(S)		BEST CONTACT METHOD
Date	Method	Topic	Notes / outcome		Follow-up?	Done

Incident / behavior documentation log

Use for anything you might need to reference again — this is the version with room for detail, dates, and who was notified.

Date	What happened (facts, not judgment)	Action taken	Parent notified?	Follow-up date

Keep this log for the students who need it — you don't have to run one for every child, just the ones where a pattern or a paper trail matters.

Class quick-tracker

One page, whole class, updated weekly — instantly see who you haven't reached lately.

Student	Last contact date	Topic	Next contact planned

The AI safe-prompt companion

Every entry above stays on paper. When you're ready to draft the actual message, describe the pattern from your log — never the child.

Turn a log row into a family email

"Draft a factual, warm-but-direct email to a family about [DESCRIBE THE PATTERN FROM YOUR LOG, e.g. 'three missing homework assignments this week']. Include one positive observation, the facts, and one clear next step. No student name — I'll add that myself before sending."

Summarize a log for a conference

"Turn these contact-log entries into a short conference-ready summary, 3-4 sentences, neutral tone: [PASTE YOUR NOTES WITH NAMES REMOVED]. End with one question I could ask the family."

Our Parent Message Makeovers pack has twelve more of these, ready to run, for the emails you rewrite four times at 9 p.m.

Filing tips

- Alphabetical, in a binder, is the fastest system to search under pressure — resist the urge to sort by "type of issue" instead.
- Start a fresh page the moment one fills up rather than squeezing in tiny handwriting — a log you can't read back isn't documentation.
- Follow your district's retention policy for how long to keep filled pages, and where signed originals belong versus your working copy.
- Photograph or scan a backup of any incident log page the same week you write it — paper gets lost exactly when you need it most.

Want the sub side covered too? Our Substitute Binder with AI builds the same kind of system for the day you're out. In our TpT store.

© Adam & Katelyn Spinozzi · AI-Ready School. Licensed to the purchasing educator (TpT single-user license); print for your own classroom. Running this across a building? Additional licenses are discounted in our TpT store. Drafted with AI assistance, the same way we teach educators to use it, then researched, revised, and approved by two certified teachers. Informational, not legal advice — follow your district's documentation policy.