Internet safety with AI: the five rules

1

A grown-up is always in the loop.

Kids don't sign up for or chat alone with an AI tool — an adult sets it up and stays nearby.

2

Never type your real info.

No full name, school, address, or photo — to an AI chatbot, a game, or a website.

3

AI can be confidently wrong.

Check anything important somewhere else before you believe it or repeat it.

4

If it feels weird, tell a grown-up.

Not in trouble — just telling. That's what keeps the internet safe for kids.

5

Strangers online stay strangers.

A friendly chatbot or a friendly stranger — same rule: don't share, don't meet up.

THE ONE-MINUTE VERSION FOR THE BACK OF THE POSTER

Talking points for each rule

Post the rules, then talk through them once out loud — a ninety-second conversation does more than a silent poster. Here's a line for each rule that holds up to a kid's follow-up question.

- 1 · A grown-up is in the loop. "AI chatbots are built for people 13 and up — that's their rule, not just ours. Below that, we explore it together."
- 2 · Never type your real info. "The AI doesn't need your name to help — it only needs to know what you're asking about."
- 3 · AI can be confidently wrong. "It guesses the next likely word — it doesn't actually know things the way a book or a teacher does. Let's check."
- 4 · Tell a grown-up. "You won't be in trouble for telling me something weird happened. You'll only ever be in trouble for hiding it."
- 5 · Strangers stay strangers. "A chatbot that sounds friendly is still not a person you know — same rules as anyone else online."

Where this fits

Pair it with our free My Digital Footprint mini-lesson for a full class period, or send the poster home as a family conversation-starter — either works.

Make it stick

- Post it where devices live — near the classroom Chromebook cart, or the family tablet charger at home.
- Revisit when something changes — a new AI tool at school, a new app a classmate mentions, a birthday near 13.
- Practice rule 4 out loud once, so "tell a grown-up" is a rehearsed move, not a cold decision in the moment.

Doubt anything AI says? Our free "Is It True?" fact-checking lesson teaches the three-step check kids can run on any confident-sounding claim. In our TpT store.
