

TURN A SCATTERED CASELOAD INTO ONE BINDER ANYONE CAN FIND ANYTHING IN

IEP ORGANIZATION BINDER

This is the shell, not the data: a binder cover and spine label, eight section dividers, a caseload overview, a meeting-dates tracker, and a contact log — the system that organizes every IEP page you already have, so a substitute, a specialist, or a Tuesday-morning version of you can find anything in it fast.

- Binder cover and spine label — two spine widths, because binders vary.
- Eight section dividers — Students · Goals · Data · Meetings · Services · Communication · Accommodations · Notes.
- Caseload overview — one row per student, by student number.
- Meeting dates tracker for annual reviews and re-evaluations.
- Contact log for every call, email, and hallway conversation worth remembering.
- "What's in this binder" index — the page a substitute reads first.
- New-student and end-of-year checklists to keep the binder current all year, not just in August.

How to use this binder

Print the cover and spine label, trim, and slide them into your binder's clear pocket and spine sleeve. Print the eight divider tabs on cardstock, cut along the dashed lines, and mount them on physical dividers (or laminate and use as-is). Fill in the caseload overview, the meeting-dates tracker, and the contact log as you go — then file each student's actual IEP pages, goal data, and service schedule behind the matching tab. The index page explains exactly what goes where.

Read this before you fill in a single line

THE CONFIDENTIALITY PAGE COMES FIRST ON PURPOSE

A completed binder holds an entire caseload's confidential special education records in one place.

Handle it the way you'd handle any single student's IEP — because it now holds all of them at once.

This page is practical handling guidance, not a statement of the law. Your district's own policy and FERPA are the actual authority — check both before you build a permanent system around this binder.

- Store the binder in a locked cabinet or a locked office — never in a bag left in a car, on a classroom counter, or anywhere a visitor could open it.
- Every page in this binder uses student numbers, never names. Keep the name-to-number key in a separate locked location that only you can access — the moment names go into the binder itself, it becomes a document that cannot leave that locked room.
- Lending a page out? Pull the one page a substitute or specialist actually needs — never hand over the whole binder.
- Ask your district's special education office where this binder and its contents fit in the official records-retention schedule before you rely on it long-term.

Binder cover & spine label

Print, trim, and slide into your binder's clear cover pocket and spine sleeve. Two spine widths, because binders vary.

BINDER COVER

CASE MANAGER

SCHOOL YEAR

BUILDING / SCHOOL

CASELOAD SIZE (FILL IN, NOT NAMES)

1" spine

2" spine

Eight section dividers — part one

Print on cardstock, cut along the dashed border of each card, and mount on your own divider tabs or slide into sheet-protector tabs.

DIVIDER 1

STUDENTS

The caseload overview from this pack — who's on it, by student number.

DIVIDER 2

GOALS

A copy of the goal pages from each student's actual IEP.

DIVIDER 3

DATA

Weekly progress data — ours or your district's own sheets.

DIVIDER 4

MEETINGS

The meeting-dates tracker from this pack, plus agendas and notes.

Eight section dividers — part two

Same instructions as part one — cut, mount, and slot in behind part one's four tabs.

DIVIDER 5

SERVICES

The service schedule — who pulls this student, when, and for how long.

DIVIDER 6

COMMUNICATION

The contact log from this pack — every call, email, and conversation.

DIVIDER 7

ACCOMMODATIONS

Snapshot sheets and guest-teacher cards — accommodations, not diagnoses.

DIVIDER 8

NOTES

Anything that doesn't fit the other seven tabs yet.

One row per student, by student number — a fast reference for who's on your caseload and where their details live, not a place to record goals or scores.

[illegible]

Annual review and re-evaluation due dates, by student number — the page that keeps a deadline from arriving as a surprise.

[illegible]

Who was spoken to, when, and about what — by student number, so a phone call from three months ago is never lost.

[illegible]

IEP ORGANIZATION BINDER

"What's in this binder" – the page a substitute reads first

Tape this to the inside front cover. It tells anyone opening the binder for the first time exactly what's behind each tab, and where the rest lives if it isn't in this pack.

Tab	What's behind it	Also in our store
Students	This pack's caseload overview.	—
Goals	A copy of the goal pages from each IEP.	IEP Goal Tracking & Data Collection Sheets
Data	Weekly progress data for each goal.	IEP Goal Tracking & Data Collection Sheets
Meetings	This pack's meeting-dates tracker, agendas, notes.	—
Services	The service schedule — who, when, how long.	—
Communication	This pack's contact log.	—
Accommodations	Snapshot sheets and a guest-teacher card.	IEP at a Glance
Notes	Behavior data, if a student needs it, or anything else.	ABC Data Sheets

Adding a student mid-year

- Follow your district's official intake process first — this checklist is a reminder, not a substitute for it.
- Assign the student a number and add a row to the caseload overview.
- Print an accommodations snapshot and file it behind the Accommodations tab.
- Add the first annual-review date to the meeting-dates tracker.
- Log the intake meeting itself in the contact log.
- Notify related-service providers and the front office who to route calls to.

Closing out the year

- Follow your district's official records-retention schedule — ask before you archive, transfer, or dispose of anything.
- For a student changing schools, hand off a fresh accommodations snapshot to the receiving case manager — not the whole binder.
- Secure or shred outdated printed pages per your district's policy once a student's record has been properly transferred or archived.
- Keep the binder shell itself — cover, spine label, and dividers reuse cleanly for next year's caseload.

What this binder is not

- Not an IEP, and not the official special education record — file official copies exactly the way your district requires, binder or no binder.
- Not a data-tracking system on its own. It organizes the data you collect elsewhere; it doesn't collect any itself.
- Not a compliance document. Confirm placement, storage, and retention with your district's special education office.

Want the data side of this family? Our IEP at a Glance, IEP Goal Tracking & Data Collection Sheets, and ABC Data Sheets fill every tab in this binder — or get all four together in The Complete IEP Binder bundle. In our TpT store.