

THE FAST FRONT DOOR TO EVERY IEP

IEP AT A GLANCE: STUDENT SNAPSHOT SHEETS

One page a general education teacher, paraprofessional, or substitute can actually use in the first week — goals in plain language, accommodations, services, contacts, and what helps in a hard moment. Blank forms the case manager fills in once per student, plus a binder cover, tab dividers, and an accommodations-only card for a guest teacher.

- Two snapshot layouts — a compact one-pager and an extended version for a student with more services or providers.
- A guest-teacher quick-reference card — accommodations only, no diagnosis, safe to hand to any adult covering the room for a day.
- Binder cover and spine label for the front of a student's support binder.
- A set of five section tabs — Goals, Accommodations, Services, Contacts, Data.
- From Accommodation to Classroom Practice — the AI page, built to never touch a completed sheet.

Read this before you fill in a single line

A completed sheet holds a student's confidential special education record.

Handle it the way you'd handle the IEP itself — because it is a summary of exactly that.

Keeping a completed sheet confidential

This page is practical handling guidance, not a statement of the law. Your district's own policy and FERPA are the actual authority — check both before you set up a system.

- Store completed sheets in a locked cabinet, a case manager's binder, or a password-protected folder — never loose in a take-home folder, a mailbox, or face-up on a desk where any visitor can read it.
- A guest teacher or a specialist covering the room gets the accommodations-only quick-reference card further in this pack — never the full snapshot with goals and services attached.
- Completed sheets come back to the case manager at the end of the year and are not sent home in a cumulative folder or a keepsake binder.
- Ask your district's special education office where completed sheets fit in the official records-retention schedule before you build a permanent system around them.

Snapshot – compact layout

Fits most students in one page. Use a student number on any copy that leaves the case manager's hands, and the student's name only on the one copy that stays in the locked file.

Keep this page current

- Re-copy the snapshot after every IEP review — a snapshot built from a plan that changed six months ago sends staff the wrong accommodations.
- Date the bottom corner in pencil so anyone picking it up can tell at a glance whether it is this year's version.
- Check it against the actual IEP once a semester, not just at the start of the year — plans change mid-year more often than paperwork gets updated.

Snapshot – extended layout

More room per section, for a student with several related-service providers, a behavior support plan, or a health accommodation the room needs to know about.

Guest-teacher quick-reference card

Hand this to a substitute, a specialist, or anyone covering the room for a day. It shows the accommodations to give — never the diagnosis, the goals, or the service minutes behind them.

Data

Tab	What goes behind it
Goals	A copy of the goal pages from the actual IEP.
Accommodations	The snapshot page from this pack, plus any setting-specific notes from specials or related-service teachers.
Services	The service schedule: who pulls this student, when, and for how long.
Contacts	Case manager, related-service providers, and the front office extension for a fast question.
Data	Weekly data sheets from our IEP Goal Tracking & Data Collection Sheets pack, if you use that family alongside this one.

From accommodation to classroom practice

This page works differently from every other AI page we build. Everywhere else, de-identified data is safe to paste. Here, the sheet itself holds identified information, so the rule is stricter.

The one rule on this page

A completed snapshot sheet never goes into a chatbot.

Only a generic accommodation type does — no student, no grade-plus-need combination, nothing traceable.

Turn a generic accommodation into a classroom routine

"A student needs extended time and directions broken into smaller steps. Suggest three practical ways to offer that in a [GRADE LEVEL] [SUBJECT] classroom of about 25 students, without singling anyone out in front of peers."

Plan for a hard moment without naming anyone

"A student benefits from a quiet space and a break card when overwhelmed. Suggest two low-key ways a busy classroom teacher could offer this without drawing the class's attention."

The chatbot only ever sees a need that could belong to any student anywhere. The name, the grade-plus-need combination, and the plan for one specific child stay with you.

What this pack is not

- Not an IEP. It is a working summary of one, built from a document the team has already finalized.
- Not a legal document and not a substitute for reading the actual IEP before you teach or support this student.
- Not a compliance record. Follow your district's official process for anything that must be filed or signed.
