

AGES 6–10 · YOUR KID RUNS THE BUSINESS · YOU RUN THE AI

My First Business

A real business, kid-sized: pick an idea, figure out what it costs, set a fair price, make a sign, sell to real people, count real money. Every step has a box for the young entrepreneur — and a coach prompt for the grown-up, because in this family kids do the thinking and grown-ups hold the keyboard.

FOR THE GROWN-UP, BEFORE PAGE ONE

AI chatbots are built for ages 13+ — so the coach prompts are yours to run.
Read results together; your kid picks, rejects, and improves. That's the lesson.

Step 1 · My big idea

My business will make or do:

People will want it because:

My business name is:

Say it out loud. Would it look good on a sign?

GROWN-UP COACH PROMPT

"A [AGE]-year-old is starting a tiny business: [THEIR IDEA]. Suggest five fun, kid-friendly business names and one tip to make the idea even better. Playful, not corporate."

Step 2 · What will it cost me?

Businesses spend money to make money. List every supply you need and what it costs. Ask a grown-up to help with prices.

Supply I need	Where I'll get it	Cost
		$
		$
		$
		$
Total it costs to make ONE:		$

GROWN-UP COACH PROMPT

"Help a [AGE]-year-old estimate supplies for a [THEIR BUSINESS]. List the likely supplies with rough prices, note anything a family probably already owns, and show how to figure the cost of making one item. Simple numbers."

Step 3 · The Rule of Three (how real sellers price)

A fair price covers three things. Fill in each box, add them up — that's your price!

1 · My supplies what one item costs to make 	2 · My work a little pay for your time 	3 · A little extra to grow the business
--	---	--

My price: $_____ · If I sell one, I keep: $_____

Price minus supplies = your profit. Say that word to a grown-up tonight. You're officially in business.

Step 4 · Tell the world (kid-safe marketing)

Design your sign here first — big letters, your price, one reason to buy:

My selling sentence (what I'll say to customers):

GROWN-UP COACH PROMPT

"A [AGE]-year-old is making a sign for their [BUSINESS]. Give three short, catchy slogan ideas a kid could letter by hand, and two friendly things to say when a customer walks up. No pressure-selling — neighborly and fun."

Safety, stated once, meant always: selling happens to people we know — family, neighbors, co-op, the block party. If anything goes online, a grown-up posts it and handles every message, and your name, face, school, and street stay off the internet. That's not a maybe; that's the deal.

Step 5 · Sale day — count it!

Every sale gets a tally. Afterward, do the two big subtractions with a grown-up.

What I sold	Tally	Money in
		$
		$
		$

All the money I collected: $_____

Minus what my supplies cost: – $_____

MY PROFIT: $_____ 🎉

Real entrepreneurs split profit three ways: some to keep, some to save, some to grow the business (more supplies!). Circle your plan with a grown-up.

Step 6 · What I learned

The best moment was:

Next time I would change:

My next business idea might be:

GROWN-UP COACH PROMPT · THE DEBRIEF

"Act as a friendly business coach debriefing a [AGE]-year-old's first sale day. I'll type what they said went well and what they'd change. Reply with two specific things to celebrate and one gentle question that gets them thinking about next time. Warm, brief, no jargon."

Ready for the next level? When your entrepreneur is 9–12, Launch It takes the same journey further: a real one-page business plan, market research, pitch practice, and a profit ledger. In our TpT store, next to our free Family AI Rules poster.

© Adam & Katelyn Spinozzi · AI-Ready School. Licensed to the purchasing family or educator (TpT single-user license); print freely for your own kids or class. Co-op or classroom sets? Additional licenses are half price in our TpT store. Drafted with AI assistance, then researched, revised, and approved by two certified teachers.